Turbine-Engined Fleets of the World's Airlines

1992 Survey

EXXON

This report on turbine-powered aircraft fleets of the world's airlines has been prepared by Aviation Data Service, Inc. (AvData), Wichita, Kansas from its data file on World Air Carrier Aircraft and verified by survey. Every effort has been made to insure accuracy of the information but complete accuracy cannot be guaranteed. Majority of airlines cooperated readily by verifying fleet and power plant details when contacted; details for the airlines unable to respond have been taken from AvData records.

Comments

The number of aircraft in service with the world's airlines once again reached a record number, with 15,181 now flying with 975 operators. This is a net increase of 530 aircraft. 1991 proved to be a very difficult year for the world's airlines. It started with the war in the Persian Gulf, which severely affected passenger loads, and ended with most of the Western economies in a recession. The totals of aircraft in service would have been considerably higher but for the demise of several airlines both in the United States and overseas. Famous names like Eastern Airlines and Pan Am shut down along with newer companies like Air Europe, Midway Airlines and Trans European Airways. Despite this, 1991 was a year of record deliveries from the major airframe manufacturers which helped to reduce the huge backlog of orders from the previous five years. Boeing delivered over 400 aircraft for the first time, while Airbus and McDonnell-Douglas topped 150 aircraft each. Fokker had a good year commencing deliveries of the Fokker 100 to American Airlines.

The overall backlog of orders for commercial transports has fallen for the first time in several years as new deliveries outpaced new orders. Once again the large, long-range transports were most in demand, with the Boeing 777, 747-400 and the Airbus A330 and A340 all gaining new commitments. The new backlog stands at 3,352 units

No major new aircraft programs were announced during 1991, but British Aerospace launched the RJ-70 version of its model 146 with an order for twenty from Business Express. The Boeing 737 passed a major milestone with the delivery of the 2,000th aircraft to Lufthansa, a model -500 variant. The Canadair Regional Jet is well into its flight testing, and the first aircraft is scheduled for delivery in mid 1992.

The Boeing 737 remains the most popular airliner in service today with 2,019 units, and a further 605 on order. The Douglas DC-9/MD-80 series has overtaken the Boeing 727 and now has 1,649 units which is a net gain of only three due to the demise of several operating airlines. The 727 was hit even harder by airline failures and lost 133 units to finish at 1,515.

The regional market remained fairly stable. Beech managed several large orders for its new model 1900D, including twenty for Commutair and 58 for Mesa Airlines and its various affiliates. The Saab 2000 has rolled out and currently has 40 firm orders, an increase of three over last year. The Dornier 328 has now flown for the first time and gained a boost with an order for 35 from Horizon Air, although this was unfortunately offset by the shutdown of Midway Airlines who had 33 on order for their commuter carrier.

The Twin Otter remains the most popular regional aircraft with 428 in service, followed again by the Fairchild/Fokker F-27 Friendship with 389 and the Swearingen Metro with 338.

This survey predominantly includes aircraft in airline service at the end of December 1991. Several exceptions to this date have been made in order to accommodate significant developments (i.e. major aircraft purchases) which occured in the first few weeks of 1992. This survey does not represent the total number of each aircraft type, as many airliners are used as executive or military transports. Some of the airlines in the survey also operate piston-engined aircraft which are not included.

Aircraft in parentheses in the order column are used aircraft, already in service with one airline, that are going to be transferred to another, and are thus not included in the orders' totals on the summary page. Also not included in the summary are the totals for Aeroflot, as no accurate figures are available. The numbers in the main text are only estimates, and are known to include many government aircraft not used in airline service.

Aircraft leased from one airline to another are recorded as such in the Remarks column, but where an aircraft is owned by a leasing group, or financial institution it is just marked as "Leased". The abbreviations used in the survey are listed in the Glossary on page 63. Once again the co-operation of the World's airlines is greatly appreciated. More than 70 per cent of them have responded to our survey.
